

Examples of disaster management programs implemented in collaboration with the residents

We support the residents' activities according to their needs, including exchange events aimed at facilitating lighthearted mutual communication and disaster management activities conducted at the condominium.

▶ Exchange events . . . Gatherings aimed at fostering relationships of mutual help in case of emergencies

▶ Disaster management activities . . . Initiative to realistically simulate a situation in the wake of the occurrence of a disaster

▶ Welcome parties (social gatherings among the residents)

Aim

Providing a starting point for developing friendly relationships between the residents

Targets

All residents

Welcome parties provide the residents with opportunities for mutual interaction. These events serve as a starting point for them to foster friendly relationships, which will allow them to communicate with each other lightheartedly in usual situations, and help each other and share information in the event of emergencies so that all residents can lead a safe and secure life at the condominium.

▶ Condominium equipment tours

Aim

Enabling the residents to learn about disaster management equipment at the condominium

Targets

All residents

We organize tours of pieces of disaster management equipment at the condominium. These tours include some enjoyable elements, such as quiz rallies around tour spots, to increase the residents' interest in disaster management. These events provide the participating families with opportunities to enjoy learning about condominium equipment that will be helpful in the event of emergencies and recommended emergency goods for them to prepare.

▶ Good Evacuator Workshops

Aim

Enabling the residents to learn the realities of a major earthquake

Targets

Adults (junior high school students or older)

We hold workshops for learning from real cases of past disasters and thinking about indoor evacuation at the condominium, including issues about the toilet or emergency food. These events are intended for the participants to aim to become "good evacuators" who can take appropriate action on their own initiative in the event of emergencies, deepen their understanding of "mutual help" between the "good evacuators," and consider necessary disaster management measures.

▶ Indoor evacuation simulation game

Aim

Enabling the residents to deepen their understanding of indoor evacuation at the condominium

Targets

Adults (junior high school students or older)

We hold simulation workshops on the supposition that the residents will continue living at the condominium in the aftermath of an earthquake. The participants will play roles of characters who live at the condominium and consider what difficulties the characters would face three hours, 24 hours, and three days after the earthquake, to use the results for preparation for comfortable indoor evacuation.

▶ Events for families with children

Aim

Enabling the participants to learn the realities of a major earthquake, helping child-rearing parents build relationships with each other, and allowing the participants to share information that is particularly necessary for child-rearing parents

Targets

Families with children (including preschoolers)

We hold events in which parents can participate with their small children, such as chats about child rearing, to provide families with children with opportunities to build human relationships with each other. The participants share information that is particularly necessary for child-rearing parents while developing relationships of mutual help at the condominium even in usual situations.

▶ Defense action

Aim

Allowing the participants to enjoy learning appropriate initial action against a disaster

Targets

Families with children (including preschoolers)

The participants can enjoy sports (soccer, rugby, etc.) combined with a game designed for them to learn about disaster management and disaster risk reduction, appropriate initial action against an earthquake, tsunami, or a fire, and recommended emergency goods. Even residents with little interest in disaster management and disaster risk reduction can participate in this activity, an ideal event for the participants to interact with each other.
